A Tax Credit or Deduction Can Help Pay for Auditory Assistance Products

Did you know?

When used to accommodate ADA guidelines in assembly areas, Listen Technologies products can be partially paid for in the US with a tax credit (up to $5,000 for small businesses) and/or a tax deduction (up to $15,000 for any size business). In certain instances, the tax savings can cover a significant portion of your purchase.

Under the ADA an assembly area is defined as a building or facility used for the purposes of entertainment, education, civic gatherings, or similar purposes.

Specific assembly areas include:

- Classrooms
- Stadiums
- Hospitals
- Performing arts centers
- Conference centers
- Arenas
- Museums
- Auditoriums
- Theaters
- Legislative chambers
- Libraries
- Courtrooms
- Convention centers
- Playhouses/dinner theaters
- Concert halls

Regarding ADA and the benefits of Listen Technologies products...

- The American with Disabilities Act (ADA) requires public facilities to provide assistive listening devices for hard of hearing people.
- Public facilities are required to provide assistive listening devices based on the number of seats.
- Listen's 72 MHz, 216 MHz, induction loops, and IR assistive listening devices meet ADA conformance guidelines.
- Listen Technologies products can be used for a variety of applications, adding value to your purchase! For example, in addition to assistive listening, the same system can be used for multi-language transmission, personal listening and portable tour group communications.
- Listen radio frequency and Infrared products are 100% compatible with existing assistive listening systems — use Listen receivers to expand a system and, in many cases, improve its sound quality. Upgrades and new systems both can qualify for tax breaks!
- For more information about tax credits and/or a tax deduction for alterations used improve accessibility under the ADA, visit the IRS tax credit and deductions page or download form 8826.
